Description

A bearded man in a gray suit wearing a hat sits in an open black-painted carriage with a young boy in a reddish jacket and cap in his lap. The carriage has yellow wheels. It is pulled by a gray horse. The carriage and horse, set to the center right of the painting, are depicted in front of a large, white-painted two story house with a columned porch, green-painted shutters, a chimney in the right hand gable and another positioned left of center. A wing is located on the left gable end of the main structure, also with a columned porch and chimney on its left gable end. A white picket fence encloses the yard around the house, which contains several trees still retaining late fall foliage. A moody, colorful sunset sky lends a reddish glow over the entire composition. A female figure leans out a window to the left of the front door, while a male walks from right to left along the fence accompanied by a young child.
