Salt glazed stoneware

Description

A salt-glazed stoneware crock, in a slightly orange-tinged yellow clay color, with a bulbous ovoid body tapering to a relatively narrow rimless base, and wide thick-rimmed mouth. A pair of strap handles are affixed to right and left sides just below the crock's rim. Simple grooved bands are lightly incised into the clay body approximately three inches below the rim. Bold splashes of cobalt blue glaze are dabbed along both handle joins. A large freeform foliate or leafy spray decorates the crock's front. The inside of the crock is glazed with dark brown slip, with drips and splashes of the slip visible on the outside of the crock. On the opposite side, the pottery's name "EATON & STOUT" is pressed into the clay.
