Salt glazed stoneware

Description

A salt glazed stoneware crock, with a bulbous body tapering to a narrow footless base and a thick lip rim at top. A pair of close-set eared handles are fixed to either side of the body at the shoulders. On one side, a man's crude profile set within a roughly drawn circle is highlighted with a splash of cobalt blue glaze, while on the opposite side of the crock is incised a second motif of roughly drawn fishscales within a circle, also highlighted with a splash of cobalt blue. The handle joins on either side are also highlighted with cobalt blue.
