Description

An overview of the residence structures of the North American Phalanx, a utopian community in Colts Neck, Monmouth County. The main residence appears in the right middle distance. The three-story section with a wide veranda contained common rooms such as a dining hall, grand salon, library, kitchen, etc. The two-story wing to its right consisted of private apartments for families. A second long three-story residence structure in the left middle distance is connected to two early farmhouses on its left end. In the foreground is a white picket fence, and beyond it a small pond with two small boats or canoes filled with people. Between the pond and the residence structures are formal gardens with an arbor to the right.
