Three-quarter length portrait of a middle age, heavy set male facing right, with ruddy complexion, hazel eyes, and gray hair cut and styled in a fashion popular in the very early nineteenth century. He wears a black or blue-black coat with wide lapels, a white shirt with ruffles, a white stock, and a white vest with an upturned collar. His left hand is tucked into the coat, with only his thumb visible.

The subject wears a single ornament: a mourning or memorial pin that is lozenge shaped with a gold rim and braided hair work within. The background is a mottled brown with a slight red cast. Mounted on wood stretchers, and lined with an unidentified newspaper sheet suffering from numerous breaks and losses.
