Description

The tall case clock includes a bonnet with a broken arch pediment and embossed brass circular medallions at the scroll ends, an incorporated central plinth and two small corner plinths with stamped brass ball and post finials (the finials are presently missing). An arched clock face door is flanked by fluted columns with stamped brass capitals and bases. The clockface of enameled iron consists of a revolving lunette with a sailing ship and a full moon, and delicate painted floral motifs at all four corners. The clock case body includes a band of figured mahogany veneer framed with narrow applied molding above a serpentine top solid door flanked by fluted columns. The clock base features highly figured veneer, a narrow applied molding strip, and a graceful double bow
