Description

A woman's formal or afternoon reception dress in one piece, constructed of a black lace overdress with an open V front bodice, loose three-quarter sleeves, and a gored skirt with a train over an oyster white silk underdress. The gown's bodice front is fashioned with a gathered oyster white georgette bib front with four black lace diamond appliques. The gown features an oyster white georgette and lace yoke and high collar, supported with thin covered wire and full sleeves of georgette and lace gathered to lace wristbands. The gown's bodice interior is fully lined and includes silk-covered boning strips placed at front, back, and along the sides of the bodice. A woven waist tape of oyster white silk includes the maker's name in pale blue "O'Hara New York 11 E 48th St."
